

HALF-TRUTHS AND WHITE LIES

Who do you think you are?
Trying to railroad me
How dare you sit there and question
My integrity

I must let the Word of God
Rest, rule, and abide in me
And not let this anger inside
Bury and consume me

You casually speak words
To judge and belittle me
While refusing to look in the mirror
Afraid of what you might see

When I remained silent
I was not agreeing with you
I was fuming inside
Had to calm down
Be the bigger person
Slowly swallow my pride

During our conversation
You went THERE several times
Little did you know
You were unable to hide
Prejudices towards me and others
You also failed to notice
I was born to recognize
Veiled half-truths and little white lies

God created me
Just like he created you
On the real, you failed to realize
His love for me is true

I may have ended the call
With a "thank you"
But believe you, me
Game recognize game and that's true

God is in control
I won't allow you to prophesy my destiny
There's absolutely nothing you can do
With a heart filled with all-consuming negativity

Be angry and sin not
That's according to the Word
I'll admit
I really wasn't ready for this
I had no idea it would be this hard

If life was too easy
We probably wouldn't pray
We'd walk around ignoring
Everything God has to say

Waste not Want not
Give not
Have not

You chose to ignore
What you already said
It's written in black and white
Not painted in blue and red

If silence is golden
Then this must be true
Actions speak louder than words
Be mindful of what you think, say, and do

My God is an awesome God
He reigns like nobody else
NOW, I need to get off my high horse
Because I think I was a little bit beside myself

For a minute, I gave you
Too much authority over me
My faith was weak
My blinded eyes refused to see
I was falling into a trap
You were trying to set from me
"Thank God! Hallelujah! I have been set free."

He keeps on showing me
Greater is He that is in me
Than he that is in the world
I don't want to say this twice
I hope you listen good to me, girl

Soon this will just
Be a distant memory
Another lesson designed
Specifically, for me

I pray time will tell
The lesson learned
As I walk away stronger
And my heart continues to burn

I must never ever
Lack faith again
Always remember
God the Father, God the friend

I must always look to heaven
Oh, yes indeed
He will supply
My every need

God, I pray I will forever put you first
Always rely on your Word and your voice
Never put my trust in those who Desire to tear my heart in two

Today and always
God is real and that's a fact
There's nothing more precious
Than the TRUTH in that
